On the May 4, troop 282 went on a campout at Stonehedge Farm. Things did not go as planned however. At 2 AM the scouts had to return home after flash flooding. Eventually the campsite was covered in standing water.

On May 22 four new scouts joined troop 282 after completing their arrow of light and crossing over the customary bridge. Their names are Zade Al Qahtani, Francis Cox, Brady Hardman and John Schweighardt.

Akela explaining the seven candles

The crossover ceremony includes selecting worthy cubs to join the boy scout troop and lighting seven candles that represent wisdom, courage, self-control, faith, hope, and love. After being selected, webelos have a golden arrow painted on their cheek and cross a small wooden bridge to become boyscouts.
